introduction

The Community Services Block Grant (CSBG) provides assistance to states to fight poverty and build self-sufficient families and communities. Working through a network of designated community action agencies, CSBG programs not only provide a wide variety of services, but also integrate and coordinate these services. This multi-faceted approach distinguishes CSBG programs from other anti-poverty efforts, and maximizes the likelihood that the individuals and families assisted will become self-sufficient.

who we are

Administered through the Office of Community Services in the Virginia Department of Social Services, Virginia's CSBG network consists of 26 local community action agencies and three statewide community action programs. Of the 26 local agencies, 24 are private non-profit community-based organizations and two are units of local government. These 29 organizations make up the Virginia Community Action Partnership, a membership association that works closely with the Virginia Office of Community Services to fight poverty and build self-sufficiency for strong families and communities across the Commonwealth of Virginia. For information on contacting a local CSBG agency to obtain help, see Appendix 9.

Virginia's community action agencies have been providing services to low-income families and the working poor for over 30 years. Basic funding is provided through the federal CSBG, with supplemental funding provided by Virginia General Assembly appropriations of general funds and federal TANF dollars. Most local community action agencies also receive support from the local governments in their service areas.

But this basic funding is only the beginning of the story. During the 2003-2004 state fiscal year, every $1 of core funding was leveraged into $8.40 of additional cash and in-kind support. During that fiscal year, Virginia's community action network generated more than $206 million in local economic activity, producing a combined savings to federal, state, and local governments of over $143 million in public assistance and services.

Public/private partnerships are central to Virginia's community action network. This approach is reinforced by the statutory requirement that CSBG-funded agencies be governed by a tri-partite board of directors consisting of elected local public officials, appointed leaders from the private sector, and representatives of the low-income community. This unique public/private sector partnership is one of the keys to the success of the effort. It is designed to tap the knowledge, experience and perspectives of all community stakeholders — including the poor themselves.

who we help

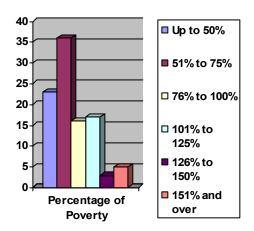

Over the course of a lifetime, poverty strikes a surprisingly high proportion of Americans. Illness, disability, unemployment, family break-up or childbirth can impoverish a family. Regardless of the cause, most families struggle against their predicament. Despite improvements due to economic growth in the 1990s, poverty afflicts 1 of every 10 Virginians. See Appendix 11.

CSBG programs assisted 124,556 persons in 2004. The characteristics of these individuals reflect an emphasis on helping those who need it.

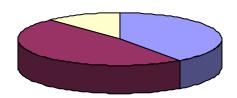

- Virtually all (95 percent) were poor or near-poor (with household incomes of less than 1.5 times the poverty line).
- More than one-third (38 percent) were working families.
- Less than half (42 percent) of families were headed by a single parent; while almost one fifth (17 percent) of families were two-parent households.
- ♦ Two-fifths (40 percent) of participants were children.
- ♦ 12 percent of participants were age 55 or older.
- 44 percent of participants did not complete high school, and only 15 percent had enrolled in or completed post secondary education.
- Nearly half (48 percent) of participants lacked health insurance, and nearly 1 in 10 (9 percent) were disabled.
- ♦ 5 percent of participants were homeless, while only 23 percent owned their own homes.
- ♦ 47 percent of participants were Caucasian; 43 percent were African American; 5 percent were Hispanic or Latino.

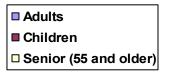

Virginia's community action agencies served a total of 124,556 persons in fiscal year 2003 - 2004.

In order to flexibly tailor the remedy to the problem, community action agencies offer a wide variety of programs and services designed to address the specific needs of the low-income families and communities they serve.

Collaborative strategies and coordination of services are key elements of CSBG programs. By working closely with local departments of social services, area agencies on aging, community service boards, faith-based organizations, and other community partners, community action agencies avoid duplicative services while providing assistance in a comprehensive, holistic manner.

Because community action agencies are for the most part private, non-profit organizations, they are by nature entrepreneurial, piloting and evaluating innovative solutions to problems, discarding approaches that are ineffective, and duplicating elsewhere programs that produce desired results and outcomes.

Types of assistance

Local community action agencies administer programs and services that address the causes of poverty at both the individual and community level. Community action agencies form a critical part of our society's safety net by providing essential emergency assistance that prevents homelessness and hunger and that safeguards the security of senior citizens, disabled persons, and at-risk children and youth residing in our communities.

Family & Individual

Development

For community action agencies, emergency assistance is a doorway through which low-income families begin their journeys toward economic self-sufficiency and productivity. After addressing the immediate crisis, community action agencies offer families long-term, permanent remedies to the root causes of poverty including employment services, vocational training, Head Start services, adult education and literacy, income management services, asset development programs, microenterprise and small business development projects, senior citizen centers and services, parenting skills training, fatherhood initiatives, affordable housing programs, violence prevention, school drop-out prevention and recovery, emergency or transitional housing projects, and affordable child care and transportation services that allow parents to maintain employment.

how we help...

Community Improvement & Economic Development

Equally important, community action agencies also work in cooperation with local governments and the business community to improve community conditions and opportunities.

Examples of community improvement and economic development projects include lowincome credit unions, affordable housing development and rehabilitation, small business development and loan programs, community water and wastewater projects, Section 8 rental housing projects, food banks and pantries, free health clinics, community diversion and ex-offender re-entry projects, rural transportation services, summer youth employment and feeding programs, afterschool child care and summer camps for children of low-income working families, domestic violence and homeless shelters, and senior citizen centers and elderly feeding programs.

Federal CSBG Goals and Service Categories

The federal CSBG statute outlines eight broad program goals that for reporting purposes are called service categories and that reflect the diversity of services and programs being administered by community action agencies across the country.

Federal CSBG Statutory Goals

- 1. Securing and maintaining employment
- 2. Securing adequate education
- 3. Better income management
- 4. Securing adequate housing
- 5. Providing emergency services
- 6. Improving nutrition
- 7. Creating linkages among anti-poverty programs
- 8. Achieving self-sufficiency

In Virginia, the single largest investment (22 percent of expenditures) is for educational services, which include Head Start support, dropout prevention and recovery projects, GED and ABE programs, projects that encourage and support youth to attend college, parenting skills training, and child care services.

Tied for second place at 20 percent of expenditures each are emergency services and linkages support. Emergency services include general emergency assistance, homeless services and shelter programs, and domestic violence services and shelter programs. Linkages support includes multi-purpose elderly projects, multi-purpose transportation services, summer camps and youth recreation programs, multi-purpose

Coming in at fourth place are housing services (16 percent of expenditures), which include homeownership programs, Section 8 projects, housing rehabilitation programs, and water/wastewater services.

Examples of CSBG Services

Examples of CSBG assistance often provide the best means of understanding how the programs help individuals and families in need while strengthening or improving the entire community.

Helen, a 41-year old Haitian woman and her daughter were referred to Total Action Against Poverty's (TAP) Women's Resource Center (WRC) after she was assaulted by her husband. WRC staff first dealt with the emergency situation, working with Helen to develop a plan of action and safety plan. After helping Helen and her daughter temporarily move in with friends, WRC resources were used to acquire and pay the first month's rent in a subsidized housing unit.

Once the initial crisis had been addressed, WRC staff provided case management services to Helen including legal advocacy, educational referrals, employment services, and weekly one-on-one counseling. Helen filed for spousal and child support and began receiving TANF benefits.

In time, she earned a GED certificate, secured a green card and work permit, and obtained employment, working 36 hours per week. Recently Helen purchased a vehicle to help in getting to work.

achieving self-sufficiency'

how we help...

Thanks to the services she received from TAP's WRC, Helen is residing in a safe home environment and continues to progress toward full self-sufficiency and U.S. citizenship. Like many of its programs, TAP uses CSBG funds to support the WRC both operationally and administratively.

A young woman whom we shall call Margaret and her two children were referred to Monticello Area Community Action Agency's (MACAA) Hope House Program, a transitional housing program for families leaving emergency homeless shelters or who are "near homeless." Margaret had lost her job and home, and was living in temporary housing arranged by her church while her children stayed with their father.

MACAA's Hope House Program provided Margaret with a rent-free furnished apartment, case management, assessment, and counseling services. Margaret was reunited with her children and secured permanent employment with the City of Charlottesville. Her children thrived in their new setting with her son being elected class president while residing in the facility. After eight months of comprehensive services, Margaret and her children moved into permanent housing and are well on their way to full self-sufficiency. CSBG funding is critical to the success of the Hope House Program, providing both program and administrative support.

CSBG Programs also address needs that affect entire communities.

Located in the heart of Virginia's coalfields and People,
Incorporated's service area (the community action agency for that region), Sun is a small community clustered around Lick Creek in Russell County. Lick Creek, included on Virginia's "List of Impaired Waters," was being badly polluted by drain lines feeding raw sewage from a number of lowincome homes in the area that did not have appropriate wastewater treatment or complete indoor plumbing.

Because most of the homes that were contributing to the pollution of Lick Creek were rental units, they would not qualify for Indoor Plumbing Rehabilitation Program funding from the Virginia Department of Housing and Community Development. In order to address this significant barrier, the owners (landlords) of the rental properties agreed to allow families to purchase their homes by converting lease agreements to mortgage documents and deeds of trust with the stipulation that each home must receive an approved permit from the Virginia Department of Health prior to closing.

Realizing that this project would only be successful through a coordinated, collaborative approach, People, Inc. established a project management team consisting of a representative from the Virginia Department of Health, a representative from the Virginia Department of Housing and Community Development, the landlords (owners) of the rental properties, a local building official, an assistant county administrator, a member of the Russell County Board of Supervisors, a low-income resident, and the executive director of People, Inc.

While this management team provided direction, leadership, and support to the project, three members of People's staff implemented, managed, and supervised the project. People, Inc. staff surveyed the low-income families and conducted initial home inspections; negotiated with landlords/owners, applied for grant funding, served as fiscal agent for the project, issued bid documents, awarded construction and septic contracts, and supervised work performed by contractors.

People, Inc. staff also met with a Virginia Department of Health official and the landlords to devise an overall wastewater treatment plan. It was determined that three of the homes could be provided with individual wastewater systems (septic systems), while the remaining seven homes would have to be part of a larger community wastewater system consisting of individual septic tanks leading to a collection system from which wastewater would be pumped to a large distribution area (septic field) on adjacent property owned by the landlord and accessed by an easement. All ten homes were inspected, work plans were developed, and bids were solicited.

As of this date, nine of the ten homes have been completed, with the level of rehabilitation ranging from moderate to substantial. One of the homes had to be demolished and a new replacement home constructed. The community wastewater system has been completed and seven homes attached to it.

As a result of this project, property values in the community of Sun have dramatically increased. These ten homes, initially assessed at an average of $10,000 to $12,000 each, are now assessed at an average of $50,000 each. Within a few short years, each of these low-income families will have substantially increased their net assets as a result of the home equity each family has acquired. In addition, quality of life has also improved as each of these families now enjoys a new or rehabilitated home with functioning indoor plumbing systems. And while it's too early yet to accurately assess the impact, the elimination of these pollution sources is expected to substantially improve the Lick Creek waterway environment.

These examples demonstrate the multifaceted approach that distinguishes CSBG programs from other anti-poverty efforts. No other program supplies the coordinated, comprehensive approach and long-term perspective of CSBG programs. The "community action approach":

- prioritizes prevention;
- addresses the causes of poverty;
- creates opportunity;
- involves and improves the community;
- is flexible and coordinates local resources;
 and
- seeks long-term solutions for clients.

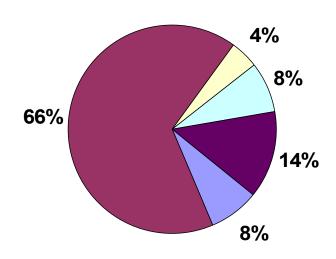

Maximizing the Public's Investment

The foundation of the CSBG network is the federal appropriation received through the CSBG. Virginia's community action network maximized the federal contribution in two ways:

- 1) adding $8 of other resources for every $1 of CSBG funds, and
- 2) utilizing volunteers who contributed over 800,000 hours of support (conservatively valued at over $4.1 million) toward the mission and operation of Virginia's community action agencies.

Community Action Resources in Virginia

what are our goals...

The 1993 Government Results and Performance Act (GPRA) directed all federal programs to move toward results-oriented management. The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services issued six broad Results Oriented Management and Accountability (ROMA) goals necessary to meet GPRA's requirements. Within these six goals, the states have complete discretion to choose the performance targets most relevant to program participants.

- 1) Low-income people become more selfsufficient.
- 2) The conditions in which low-income people live are improved.
- 3) Low-income people own a stake in their community.
- 4) Partnerships among supporters and providers of services to low-income people are achieved.
- 5) Agencies increase their capacity to achieve results.
- 6) Low-income people, especially vulnerable populations, achieve their potential by strengthening family and other supportive systems.
- * Six national "Results-Oriented Management and Accountability (ROMA) goals adopted by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Significant Outcomes Achieved by Virginia's Community Action Network during the 2003-2004 Fiscal Year.

For a complete listing of outcomes achieved, see Appendix 3.

- 948 unemployed persons obtained a job
- 222 employed persons obtained a better job (increase in employment income)
- 9,331 children ages 3 and 4 participated in pre-school activities such as Head Start to develop school readiness skills
- 30,258 households or families received emergency assistance
- 476 children participated in "before" and/or "after" school programs, enabling their parents to work
- 979 persons obtained access to transportation that enabled them to work
- 145 persons received GED certificates
- 2,927 safe and affordable housing units were preserved or improved through construction, rehabilitation, and weatherization services
- 1,038 safe and affordable housing units were newly created
- 1,046 partnerships with public and private sector organizations were maintained in order to expand and coordinate community resources for low-income families more accomplishments...

Significant Outcomes Achieved by Virginia's Community Action Network during the 2003-2004 Fiscal Year.

For a complete listing of outcomes achieved, see Appendix 3.

- 2,351 senior citizens were able to maintain independent living situations as a result of supportive services provided
- 2,560 people were provided access to affordable heath care services or facilities
- 1,109 families were protected from domestic violence
- 1,158 families received shelter or emergency housing services
- 3,632 youth participated in programs designed to prevent or reduce risk-taking behaviors
- 641 youth increased their academic, athletic, or social skills for school success by participating in before or after school programs
- 2,781 ex-offenders demonstrated reduced recidivism by remaining out of prison for 6 months or more and/or achieving stable family living arrangements
- 402 parents learned and exhibited improved parenting skills
- 521 adults improved their computer skills through training
- 2 community action agencies operated low-income credit unions composed of 1,285 members with assets totaling $3,293,465.

other accomplishments

CSBG programs tap into the best spirit of American volunteerism and public-private sector cooperation. Almost 15 percent of Virginia's CSBG program budget comes from private sector contributions, including foundation grants, the United Way, cash and in-kind services donated by businesses, and donations and volunteer work from ordinary Americans. Volunteers donated more than 800,000 hours of their time. This is the equivalent of almost 385 full-time, year-round employees, or — put another way — a $4.1 million contribution if their time is valued at no more than the federal minimum wage.
